Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from Second Annual Report of the Midwifery Dispensary: 314 Broome Street, New York City The Midwifery Dispensary has completed its second year, and presents to the medical public in this report the results of the twelve months ending December 31st, 1891. The Dispensary occupied on the 18th of January, 1890, a single apartment in a Broome-Street tenement, and accommodated a resident physician and three students. It was not associated with any medical school, and was dependent for its income upon the generous gifts of its friends. It had no patients, and there had been no demand on the part of the medical student for such an opportunity as it was proposed to offer him. At the present time nearly the whole of a five-story tenement has been absorbed for the uses of the Dispensary, and its medical staff has increased until now it consists of a resident physician, three assistants, and twenty students, together with two trained nurses. The number of patients has increased to an average of five per day, and the applications of students are so numerous that there is often no vacancy for several weeks in succession. The Midwifery Dispensary still stands unallied to any other educational institution, and will continue to do so. In fact, it must adhere to this policy, for no one school or college could supply the number of students necessary to accomplish its work. Two of the largest medical schools in this city, however, have recognized the value of a practical course in obstetrics, and refer all their students to this institution for the two weeks course. The financial outlook of this enterprise has also assumed a very...
